

A Manifesto for Science & Math-Ph

1. I am doing this in the spirit of science.

- In the spirit of teaching, a crucial element to nurture new and sharp scientific minds,
- In the spirit of human values, which are inherently connected to teaching quality.
- In the spirit of mathematical physics research, which is absent in India.
 - To travel and preach these ideas publicly in the academic walls, to ignite and leave a guiding remark on these ideas.
- In the spirit of slow, sustainable, hollistic, asrtistic and ultimately quality, science.
- In the spirit of breaking chains of poverty (in knowledge in many lines), as a way to move to a different social strata holding the privilege to reason politics, art, health and and quality of life.

2. I am doing this to secure a living abroad for the next few years

- Where there is indeed a high quality of life.
- Where math-ph is established deeply.
- Where the human values around teaching and doing science are appreciated.
- Where I get a competetive pay.
- Where I feel a sense of success through the lens of family and middle-class Hyderabad society.

3. I am doing this to secure a strong base for my personal life intersecting with a professional passion

- So that I can help in giving a professional healthcare for my family and mine.

- So that I can help increase the quality of life for my family.
 - So that I become privileged enough to think and act about societal problems.
 - So that I can indulge in learnings and other lively activities beyond those merely needed for securing a stable life.

- This process is inherently
 - Slow and externally un-rewarding.
 - Un-supported and un-understood.
 - Confusing and doubtful.
 - But very meaningful and highly potential.
 - Not immediately beneficial or relevant to societal problems.
- So it's very easy to
 - Feel alone
 - Feel hopeless
 - Feel a crisis regarding careers
 - Get lost planning alternatives

But there lies almost another world upon cruising through these difficult years! Filled with the power and confidence to knock doors! To maybe even creating new doors too!

A man in progress.

A human in progress.

A scholar in progress.
